Preamble

What is the current contribution of experimental and theoretical chemistry in the innovation, nutrition, production and development of synthetic and natural therapeutic products; especially under the conditions of the current challenges imposed by the Covid-19 pandemic?

The answer to these questions can be envisaged through the first International Congress of Innovations in Chemistry for Therapeutic Aims which will be organized by the Material Sciences department of the University Larbi Ben M'Hidi Oum El Bouaghi.

The main objective of this congress is to discuss current uses and future applications of chemistry in all its branches for therapeutic purposes by providing a platform for chemistry researchers and doctoral (Phd) students to exchange and develop their knowledge in this field.

The 1st International Congress of the ICTA revolves around five sub-themes of chemistry which are at the interfaces with pharmacology, biochemistry and food sciences. The scientific program will cover three major themes :

Themes

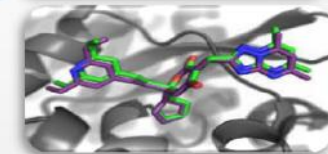

1. Bio-molecular evaluation and natural products

2. Pharmacognosy, food security and human nutrition

1. Organic synthesis with biological applications and green chemistry

2. Bio-inorganic chemistry and catalysis

1. Molecular docking and enhancement of bioactive potential
