Argument:

The world today lives in the age of "Media Disclosure" It is based on the rapid transition from the traditional state to the digital environment of virtual societies, in which the real digital environment is compensated and electronic language-speaking areas are transformed into an important engine of public speech and an essential source of data, which is becoming increasingly common, especially after the accelerated integration into the digital world information and data have become readily available and accessible to users. understand under these circumstances, the need for media safety security in society is essential to reduce the risks of media exposure. and especially above cyberterrorism, cybercrime, and various risks arising from the illegal use of social media, such as piracy, spreading rumors, and fake news, users are instead appropriately advised to make the best use of social media without invasion of privacy and interference with freedom of speech and expression. This forum primarily aims to address the issue topic of media disclosure about media safety as an essential requirement in today's world to protect social media recipients and users from the risks posed by the irrational and unconscious consumption of information across virtual areas.

Conference's tracks:

- 1- Theoretical background of the concepts: media disclosure and media security
- 2- Media Security and Information Risks across Digital Spaces
- 3- Requirements for information security and protection against the risks of information in light of media disclosure
