PREAMBLE

The "Methodology Of Historical Research " is considered to be one of the main pillars of research in the human sciences, which is needed to produce any academic work in a Scientific way. Thus, this conference casts light over its importance and seeks to discuss the main points that pertain to the historical research method.

Perhaps the most obstacle that faces the researcher and the student in his academic and scientific journey, is the acquisition and choice of the right scientific methodology, which transfers the academic work from the literature to the scientific side. On the other hand, our students at the university still often do not give major importance to the methodological field in their research during the first five years they spend at the university, and when they reach the last year of their formation, which requires them to complete a graduation thesis, they are faced with the urgent need to opt for the suitable "scientific method".

The idea of creating a national forum on the methodology of historical research came for the need of academic requirements, and in the hope of forming our students in the methodology of historical research, especially with the presence of our college professors from other Universities.
