

University of Oum El Bouaghi

Bachelor's degree in Politics & International Studies programs 1st year common core in political science

Program Description:

A bachelor's degree in political science is designed to intellectually prepare students to pursue master's degrees in public policies. This program allows the graduate to hold many careers such as in Central and local administration in Algeria; The international organizations; nonprofit associations and organizations; campaign management and polling; journalism; electoral politics; graduate education; and research and university/college teaching.

Upon completing the requirements for the BA in Political Science, students should be able to:

- Critically read texts. Beyond reading comprehension, this skill demands an ability to assess bias, interpretation, and distinguish between weaker and stronger arguments.
- Think analytically. Political Science classes will train students how to understand complex problems and arguments through texts, lecture, and classroom discussions.
- Write at an advanced level. This will provide them the tools to continue their education or excel at workplace communication.
- Articulate an informed perspective on contemporary political issues. This baseline knowledge is a crucial component of their education.
- Demonstrate understanding of the history of ideas and how this history shapes the political world. The major gives students an informed perspective on the present, analytic thinking skills to understand the future, and an understanding of the history of ideas to access the past.

The current training program includes the following subjects that are taught in the different educational units (basic, methodological, exploratory, horizontal):

- Introduction to political science
 -
- History of political thought
- political economy
- political science methodology
- Algerian political history
- An introduction to sociology
- Political Sociology
- Introduction to legal sciences
- English Language
- computer science and quantitative studies

programs 2nd year common core in political science

Program Description:

A bachelor's degree in political science is designed to intellectually prepare students to pursue master's degrees in public policies. This program allows the graduate to hold many careers such as in Central and local administration in Algeria; The international organizations; nonprofit associations and organizations; campaign management and polling; journalism; electoral politics; graduate education; and research and university/college teaching.

Upon completing the requirements for the BA in Political Science, students should be able to:

- Critically read texts. Beyond reading comprehension, this skill demands an ability to assess bias, interpretation, and distinguish between weaker and stronger arguments.
- Think analytically. Political Science classes will train students how to understand complex problems and arguments through texts, lecture, and classroom discussions.
- Write at an advanced level. This will provide them the tools to continue their education or excel at workplace communication.

– Articulate an informed perspective on contemporary political issues. This baseline knowledge is a crucial component of their education.

-Demonstrate understanding of the history of ideas and how this history shapes the political world. The major gives students an informed perspective on the present, analytic thinking skills to understand the future, and an understanding of the history of ideas to access the past.

The current training program includes the following subjects that are taught in the different educational units (basic, methodological, exploratory, horizontal):

- Introduction to management science
- International relations theory
- Comparative political systems
- The epistemology of political science
- History of international relations
- International and regional organizations
- Political and administrative institutions in Algeria
- Geopolitics
- Sustainable development and anti-corruption
- Policy Designing and decision making
- English Language

programs 3rd year- political and administrative organization

Program Description:

Political and administrative sciences focus on the study of governments, nations, politics, states, and their socio-economic, political, and environmental policies. The discipline involves analysing the political situation of a country, learning what factors affect this situation, and being able to come up with effective solutions to any kind of ensuing problems. The discipline also aims to guide politicians in their decision-making, either in local or national governments, or in other contexts like international organisations and NGOs.

Students on our Degree in Political and Administrative Sciences are trained to detect all the factors which influence a specific political situation. The undergraduate course enables them to analyse these factors in depth, and offer solutions to any kind of related problems. Throughout the duration of the degree, they become experts in politics and governmental administration, gaining the necessary skills to understand the characteristics of any nation they wish to study.

Students who complete our degree have employment prospects in a broad range of fields. For example, they can work both in the public and the private sector as political analysts, national and international advisers, organisation managers, researchers or teachers. Experts in political and administration sciences are highly sought-after in many countries. They are especially sought after in international organisations, NGOs and by foreign governments during negotiation processes.

Experts in this field learn how to detect and analyse the complex reality of any given political situation, how to change it, and improve it. They are vital for the correct functioning of our society.

The current training program includes the following subjects that are taught in the different educational units (basic, methodological, exploratory, horizontal):

- Organization and management theories
- Human Resource Management
- Administrative development
- comparison policy
- Local development Management
- Management training
- Administrative editing
- Political reform in the Arab region
- Local community management
- Legislative system in Algeria
- Freedoms and human rights
- Public Finance
- Economic policies in Algeria